

Protect your business and your workers.

Ensure your labour hire providers are licensed.

LABOUR
HIRE
AUTHORITY

Always check the labour hire licence.

If you run a meat processing business and you pay a company to provide workers, you're probably a labour hire host.

Under Victorian law, businesses that supply these workers must hold a labour hire licence, be run by fit and proper people and comply with all relevant laws.

If you use an unlicensed labour hire provider, it could cost you – fines of over $600,000, loss of contracts, workers, your reputation, even your business.

For tools and tips to protect your business when engaging a labour hire provider, and to check your provider's licence, visit labourhireauthority.vic.gov.au/meat-host

