

Protect your business and your workers.

Always check the labour hire licence.

If your horticulture business pays a company to provide workers to pick, pack or plant fruit or vegetables, you're probably a labour hire host.

Under Victorian law, businesses that supply these workers must hold a labour hire licence, be run by fit and proper people and comply with all relevant laws.

If you use an unlicensed labour hire provider, it could cost you – fines of over $600,000, loss of contracts, workers, your reputation, even your business.

For more information or to check your labour hire provider's licence visit labourhireauthority.vic.gov.au/hort-host

